Faith is a rational attempt to transcend the boundary of logical thoughts in order to enter into the expansive domain of the spiritual with the purpose of seeking to experience things which are beyond the physical realm. Through faith, human beings become possible to be connected with the spiritual. When the faith window is opened up, new insights of the world, the universe, and the self will emerge. These new insights will help us appreciate the importance of the present more.

Though many may prefer not to establish faith relationship with any deity, and their decision should be respected. Yet, by nature, human beings often desire to build personal relationship with god, gods, and even with unknown gods. For instance, over two thousand years ago, men of Athens had worshipped “AN UNKNOWN GOD!” (Reference: The book of Acts 17:23 in the Bible)

But for now, let us focus on the present. The present is freely given and no one is denied to receive it. It is all ours and is completely at our disposal. Therefore, the present is a present because it is freely given and freely received. The present is a free gift from the creator! For the newlyweds, the present is precious. As you celebrate your love in marriage, cherish the present and enjoy your new life together!
